Travel tips

Outside major cities, credit cards are not always accepted and the availability of ATMs is limited. Cashless payments via smartphone applications such as WeChat Pay are increasingly commonplace

Carry your passport with you at all times. Police carry out random checks, especially during periods of heightened security and major sporting or political events. Failure to produce your ID can lead to a fine or detention

Certain behaviours may be deemed sensitive and attract greater scrutiny from the authorities, including photography near sensitive sites, engaging with political groups or charities, and making statements deemed to be politically sensitive

The Chinese authorities maintain controls on internet access. Some services, including Google, Facebook, YouTube and Twitter are permanently blocked. Other websites may be blocked from time to time. See the staying in touch section

Gambling is illegal in mainland China

You need a Chinese driving licence to drive in China. You must also have valid insurance

You will need to produce your passport to buy a train ticket and again to board the train

If you need emergency medical assistance during your trip, dial 120 and ask for an ambulance. You should contact your insurance/medical assistance company promptly if you need treatment

Healthcare is not free in China and can be very expensive. Make sure you have comprehensive travel and medical insurance covering healthcare and medical evacuation/repatriation for the duration of your stay

Tap water in China is generally not safe to drink. You should drink only bottled water.

More advice on visiting China can be found on Gov.uk

Etiquette

Do:

- Greet others by using a handshake or a nod
- Present and receive things with both hands
- Address the eldest or most senior person first
- Tap the table when someone refills your tea
- Walk in a clockwise direction when touring a temple or monastery
- Take off your hat when entering temples

Don't:

- Don't offer too firm of a handshake
- Don't tap your chopsticks or stick your chopsticks in the bowl
- Don't use your own chopsticks to pick food from the central dishes
- Don't put bones, seeds or other inedibles into in your rice bowl
- Write in red ink

Staying in touch

We understand that staying in touch with friends and family back in the UK is important for fans making the trip to China, whether that be through sharing photos on Instagram, posting updates on Twitter or sending a message through Facebook. Unfortunately these sites and apps are blocked throughout China however there are many ways fans can communicate and stay in touch.

WeChat and WeChat Pay

WeChat is a Chinese multi-purpose messaging, social media and mobile payment app developed by Tencent. It is one of the world's largest standalone mobile apps with over 1 billion monthly active users

WeChat is available on iOS and Android and we recommended supporters use this app as a cashless payment option as opposed to using credit / debit cards which may not be widely accepted

WhatsApp

WhatsApp is fully functional in China including messaging, file sharing and voice / video calling

Email

All Google websites are officially blocked in China so accessing a Gmail account would require use of a VPN
It is currently unclear whether Outlook accounts are accessible in China so a VPN would be required to guarantee access
Yahoo mail accounts are fully accessible in China

Mobile Phones

Mobile phones from other countries do work in China however calls can be expensive. It is worth clarifying charges with your network provider before travelling

Social media

Twitter, Facebook, Instagram and Snapchat are blocked by the Chinese government, however can be accessed in China with a VPN. As fans will only be in China for a short period, it may be worth investing in a subscription to a VPN to ensure access to your social media accounts

What is a VPN?

A virtual private network extends a private network across a public network, and enables users to send and receive data across shared or public networks as if their computing devices were directly connected to the private network.

Video Calling

Both FaceTime and Skype are fully functional in China
