hello@purcellbranding @purcellbranding @purcellbranding

Good afternoon all,

Welcome back to Bucks Head for today's fixture versus the league leaders Newcastle United.

After another frustrating weekend with last Sunday's postponement, the players have responded well, and training has been fantastic this week. With just under half the league fixtures still to play in seven weeks, we know how tough the run-in will be so it's going to be a huge test for all involved, and no bigger test than against today's opposition. After a good performance away from home, which I don't think was reflected in the scoreline, the players are keen to make sure we compete. In what has been a difficult year, we have continued to prove we are still able to compete with the teams at the top of this league but just not been consistent with our approach. With so many games left to play, this gives us a great opportunity to put this right.

As Ramadan got underway earlier this week, Layla Banaras held a session for fellow first-team players to explain how she manages her training programme while she's fasting. She's done some pioneering work around supporting other Muslim athletes, after finding little information available around nutrition during Ramadan.

Furthermore, non-profit organisation Nujum Sports, who do fantastic work for Muslim athletes up and down the country, were at Compton this week to give out their annual Ramadan packs to all of Wolves' Muslim athletes, including Layla.

We look forward to supporting Layla throughout the Holy Month and wish all of our Muslim supporters a peaceful Ramadan.

With Molineux fast approaching, we need you over the next few league games so get behind the players and let's make two more great home occasions.

Thanks,

Macca

MANAGER
DAN McNAMARA

Friday night football comes to Molineux as Wolves Women host the Black Country derby against West Bromwich Albion Women.

Dan McNamara's side return to the golden palace to kick-start Women's Football Weekend against their local rivals.

The two sides will go head-to-head in the FA Women's National League, just over a week before Molineux hosts the Continental Tyres League Cup final.

The Old Gold last played a league match at Molineux in April 2023, where a record-breaking 3,834 supporters witnessed a five-goal victory over Huddersfield Town.

Wolves season ticket holders can enter free but must book a ticket online using their supporter number. Season ticket holders must select the "STH Free" price class when selecting their seats.

Tickets for non-season ticket holders are priced at £5 adults, £4 for concessions and £1 for under-16s.

Speaking on Wolves Weekly, an International Women's Day special, Wolves academy manager for operations Laura Nicholls said: "Playing under the lights at Molineux will be a fantastic opportunity for fans who perhaps haven't already engaged with us to come along.

"It's the international break so hopefully we can get fans that have never seen either of the women's teams of both clubs play.

"It's also the day the schools break up so hopefully parents with children can come down and support. It should be a fantastic spectacle, occasion and another memory in the bank for everyone."

Head of women and girls football, Jenna Burke-Martin, added: "It's fantastic to get Wolves Women back playing at Molineux again this season. Playing at the main stadium is always a highlight in our season.

"It gives the players, staff and fans another opportunity to experience the Premier League facilities that we have here. Showcasing the team in an evening league game against our local rivals is a great opportunity for us and hopefully we will see another record-breaking crowd in attendance."

Arsenal and Chelsea will contest the 2024 FA Women's Continental Tyres League Cup final at Molineux two weeks today.

The thirteenth final of the competition will be played on Sunday 31st March 2024, kick-off 3pm, and broadcast live on the BBC.

Molineux has previously played host to women's international football, with England lifting the Arnold Clark Trophy against Germany back in February 2021, and also for a Lionesses friendly fixture against Belgium in June 2022.

Last season's FA Women's Continental Tyres League Cup final saw Arsenal secure a 3-1 win over Chelsea at Crystal Palace's Selhurst Park in front of a record attendance of 19,010.

Matt Wild, general manager of football operations at Wolves, said: "On the back of successfully hosting both England's men's and women's fixtures across 2022, we're delighted that the FA are choosing Molineux to host a cup final here.

"We attracted big crowds for those fixtures and, given the success of the Lionesses and Wolves Women in recent years, we're hoping the people of Wolverhampton and further afield take the opportunity to watch a women's cup final."

Tickets for the final at Molineux are now on sale, with adult tickets from £15, concessions for £7 and kids for £5.

Tickets are available to purchase at wolves.co.uk/tickets.

Tickets to all games at Molineux can be purchased here:

Summer Holmes: In the spotlight

After returning from injury, women's first-teamer Summer Holmes dissects the central midfield position before delving into the future to predict what her career, Wolves Women and women's football could look like in five years' time.

POSITIONAL PLAY

DID YOU ALWAYS WANT TO BE A CENTRE MIDFIELDER?

I've always wanted to be a centre-mid. Steven Gerrard was my favourite player growing up, so I've always wanted to play there. When I was coming through at Wolves I did play up front for a bit, but I've always been a centre-mid.

WHAT IS THE BEST PART OF BEING A CENTRE MIDFIELDER?

Being able to get on the ball as much as I can. I enjoy being on the ball, getting into tackles and I just really like being the engine of the team and always being involved with everything coming through me. It's the best position on the pitch.

WHAT IS THE HARDEST PART OF BEING A CENTRE MIDFIELDER?

Probably being that engine. You have to be constantly switched on to everything that's around you, get back and help out in defence, and then have the legs to get up the other end. I have dropped a bit deeper in the midfield as I've got a bit older.

WHAT QUALITIES ARE NEEDED TO BE A CENTRE MIDFIELDER?

You need to have good awareness and be able to see all around the pitch – behind you, in front of you, out wide, and you also need to be able to pick a good pass and spray a few balls. You also need to have good control, and be calm and collected on the ball.

WHAT DO YOU WORK ON MOST AS A CENTRE MIDFIELDER?

It's mainly the switching of play. Getting the ball into feet from one position and then getting it out quickly to the wingers or up to the number nine.

WHAT OTHER POSITION WOULD YOU LIKE TO PLAY?

It would probably be a striker. I think everyone would want to be a striker, although I probably wouldn't fancy my chances up front – I don't score many goals as it is, but I'd give it a go.

WHAT IS THE HARDEST OTHER POSITION TO PLAY?

On the wings or as a wing-back. The game has changed massively since I first started, so the wingers and wing-backs are having to get up and down the pitch constantly, and they have to cover every blade of grass on their side.

WHICH OTHER CENTRE MIDFIELDERS DO YOU WATCH AND LEARN FROM?

Sophie Ingle, who plays for Chelsea and she's the Wales captain. She's dating a girl who I used to play with, so I know Sophie and I do like to watch her play. I've seen how good she is in centre-mid for both Chelsea and Wales.

IN FIVE YEARS' TIME...

PERSONAL ACHIEVEMENTS

I want to play at the top level still. I'm 28 now and I'm still kind of young, so there is still a chance of getting there, and hopefully I can do it with Wolves. If we can get promoted, carry on up the divisions and become a full-time footballer, that would be my dream. I would love to be a full-time footballer and play at the top level – everyone who's ever played football wants to do that.

WOLVES' FUTURE

I'd hope Wolves were following the same path as I want to have taken. In five years I hope we'd have got into the Championship, become a professional club, and even pushing for the Super League. I think being in the Championship is realistic as we've come so close over the last few years, but every year this league gets tougher because of all the money and backing teams are getting.

HOPES FOR THE WOMEN'S GAME

I think it can become a lot bigger. Obviously, it's grown massive in the last three or four years, especially since England won the Euros and got to the World Cup final, and they're getting massive crowds up in the Super League, there are record attendances almost every week, so it can only keep getting better and better, and with more money coming into it, the better it will become.

CHANGES TO WOMEN'S FOOTBALL

Spectators are growing and that is key, especially for teams like us in the lower divisions. We need to get more money and more people watching the game, but also with the men's game, teams have got so much more backing even when it comes to just staff at the club. At our level, we don't have as much as the men's team does, so increasing staff in the background will really help, as well as the fact we have to work as well, so come the end of the week, you're tired.

REMEMBERING THE CURRENT WOLVES TEAM

Hopefully we'll be remembered as the team who took Wolves into the Championship. Obviously, I want to win the league this year, although it might be difficult for us to do that, or even next year – whenever it may be. We've come close the last few years, but if we could take Wolves into the Championship, and become a professional team, that would be a really proud moment for us all as that would change the game for Wolves Women.

BETH ROBERTS

She joined Wolves from Stoke City last February and slotted straight in at left-back, making her debut in an emphatic 3-1 win over Nottingham Forest and quickly becoming a fans' favourite.

Roy Williams

By Matt Ponter

Back in the early 2000s, a young footballer named Hannah Williams had just joined the Wolves Centre of Excellence.

She went on to play for Wolves in multiple spells, as well as Leicester City, Stoke City, and later in her career Aston Villa. During that time, her father Roy was still working as a police constable, but through his daughter he began his career with Wolves Women.

Roy started as any parent would, by watching on from the side lines while his daughter played for Stafford Falcons Under-10s. When she moved to Wolves, Roy assisted by running the line, and was later approached to help coach. From there, Roy moved around with Hannah until he settled with the Old Gold but can still recall all the core memories.

"She made her first appearance in the reserves, playing at left back," says Roy.

"It was against Liverpool, they lost 1-0 but she played a great game. I can also remember her debut for the first team away at Blackburn.

"The girls lost 5-3, though I can recall the game well as the club captain at the time told me how much Hannah had stepped up, and she never went backwards after that."

Away from his work with Wolves, Roy is now in his 54th year working in the police force. He started in January 1970 as a police constable. His best years in the force were the 15 he spent as a mounted officer. He loved the job he did and was part of the national group of officers responsible for testing other mounted courses being run around the country.

For his last 10 years as a constable, Roy trained horses and riders, before funding was cut. He retired in April 2002, but remained as a civilian support staff member.

Roy notes that, "being a mounted officer was great."

"For 15 years I rode horses, until they decided to get rid of them and bring in the helicopters! There was never an inkling to gaining promotion either, as they would have moved me to a different department straight away.

"I enjoyed meeting different people all of the time, especially in what we called the show season as we competed in mounting shows."

Nowadays Roy is a fitness coach for Wolves Women. His role means that he is only on-site for matchdays. Roy leads some of the warm-ups with the team and does the pre-match warm up when they appear from the tunnel just before kick-off.

Roy also has a few extra roles that, whilst small, make a huge difference.

"I usually liaise with the other teams and officials and gather all the necessary reports for those that need them." He explains.

"One of the biggest things for me though is keeping Dan in check during games! You can imagine when tempers can flare, or if he is about to say something out of turn, I'm always right next to him."

"When we travel away, I have the responsibility as travel liaison officer, just keeping everyone in touch as to what time we are due to arrive and when we need to take breaks.

"Years ago I remember travelling in a minibus when my daughter was playing, an away game at Radcliffe. On the way back we stopped for fuel, and not knowing what to put in, we added petrol and not diesel! Thankfully we now have coaches."

Roy has gained a lot of experience working with the women's team throughout the years and knows how much the squad fight for every challenge, opportunity, and ultimately every goal.

His highlights of this season are the FA Cup games against Reading and Brighton. But Roy also recalls the times when the girls got so near to promotion to the Championship.

"I think back to games from over the seasons, and what could have been. When we played Southampton and lost 1-0, Dan was away with the RAF, but on the phone for a lot of the game.

"We went down to 10 players after half an hour, a goal behind and that's how it finished. We had a chance five minutes before the end but just couldn't convert. It was a great season, but that game was what might have been."

TODAY'S OPPONENTS:

NEWCASTLE UNITED

Formed in 1989 as Newcastle United Ladies, the team originally played in the North Western Regional League before promotion in the summer of 1999 to the Northern Combination League, then the fourth tier of the women's pyramid.

The team soon established themselves at this new level and created a youth set-up based at the University of Northumbria with the aim of capturing the up-and-coming talent in the local area. Within two years the club put a plan in place to reach the FA Women's Premier League within five years, alongside a partnership with Newcastle City Council's Football Development Scheme.

It took them less than four years to achieve their goal as they finished runners-up to Stockport County in 2002/03 before capturing the title in 2004/05, gaining with it promotion to the Northern Division. They captured the Northumberland FA Senior Cup that same season and were honoured with a civic reception where they displayed both trophies. In the summer of 2005, they were also renamed Newcastle United Women and launched their own dedicated website.

They retained their Premier League Northern Division status for six seasons, generally finishing mid-table, but were relegated in the summer of 2011. Undeterred, they bounced straight back, securing the Northern Combination title.

This time their stay was for five years before relegation again, to what was now National League Division One North.

The summer of 2017 saw them become part of the Newcastle United Foundation, the registered charity arm of Newcastle United FC.

The team battled on over the next four seasons, seeing little reward apart from Northumberland FA Senior Cup success, until 2021/22 when they fought out a title fight with Liverpool Feds, eventually falling three points short and having to settle for runners-up spot. At the end of the season, they also played a first competitive game at St James' Park where a crowd of over 22,000 saw a 4-0 Magpies win.

Last season they finally returned to the third tier following a season-long battle with Durham Cestria. Home games at Kingston Park regularly saw four figure attendances as they eventually captured the title on goal difference, both Newcastle and Durham finishing on 56 points. Their final home game, a 4-0 win over Bradford City, was played at St James' Park in front of a crowd of 24,000.

Now backed by the men's club, they are the only fully professional side in the FA Women's National League, and look on course to achieve their aim of promotion to the Women's Championship at the end of this season.
